POLICE KILLINGS OF AFRICAN AMERICANS: WHAT'S LAW GOT TO DO WITH IT?

The recent shooting deaths by police of African Americans across the country have ignited another round of debates about race and policing. Media framings of the problem typically focus on “bad cops.” But we need to ask a harder question at the very core of American democracy:

What's law got to do with it?

This inaugural edition of our roundtable discussion series – CrossCheck Live – explores how law enables police violence and what we can do about it.

Wednesday, October 19, 2016
